The title

and a possibly very long subtitle

the author

The first section

The first slide

With just some text in it.

The second slide

A first, multiline paragraph with some random words and even a correctly placed footnote[1]. Can you believe that? Because honestly I thought automatically placing footnotes was very hard.

And a second paragraph here.

---
[1] ... And this is the footnote.

Some bullet points

- one
- two
  - one
    - one
    - two
  - two
  - three
- three

And a nested numbered list

1. one
2. two
   2.1 one
      2.1.1 one
      2.1.2 two
   2.2 two
   2.3 three
3. three

Another text slide

Where the text

Is followed by a subheading

And some more text

A quote

Introduced by some text, here are > Some words of wisdom

And a comment

The fancy section

With a caption

Some code

A syntax-highlighted code example:

```haskell
haskellExample :: From -> To haskellExample from = to
```